Dr. Daniel Raible is an Electronics Engineer within the Optics and Photonics Branch at the NASA Glenn Research Center at Lewis Field. Dr. Raible earned his Bachelor of Science, Master of Science and Doctorate in Engineering from Cleveland State University. He is an Adjunct Professor at the University of Akron in the Aerospace Systems Engineering Program. Dr. Raible was the recipient of the Wings of Excellence Award from the Cleveland Federal Executive Board. He leads interdisciplinary NASA teams, collaborates with industry and other government agencies, and administers several SBIR contracts.

The presentation will introduce the emergence of laser technology to provide communication and navigation services to spacecraft throughout the solar system. Current research and development efforts to enhance system performance will be discussed, with particular attention given to physical & regulatory challenges and constraints, team dynamics, academic and industrial collaborations and the difficulty of introducing new technologies to space systems.

Refreshments and beverages will be served.

RSVP: Dr. Lili Dong • L.Dong34@csuohio • 216-687-5312
